

A Highly Selective List of Resources for Activism:

Start by finding out who represents you in government.

Use this link <https://www.contactingcongress.org/> (city, state and zip code) to find ALL of your elected officials*:
Federal, State and Local.

*US House of Representatives – often split zip codes, esp in NYC, so use this link <https://www.contactingcongress.org/local> to enter your address. Try bookmarking your page and/or printing out the results.

Indivisible (Indivisible.org)

Run by former congressional staffers with ideas and tips for organizing, mobilizing, contacting government officials and finding similar groups. They have a weekly calendar of actions as well as scripts for phone calls and ways to get involved. They have launched satellite indivisible groups around the country to mobilize people everywhere. They were instrumental in helping to achieve the blue wave during the midterms.

Similar to Indivisible, but with a narrower mandate, Swing Left seeks to make good on its name. Targeting swing states in each election cycle, the group offers explainers, breakdowns and an easy way to pitch in even if your state isn't on the list. They have a fantastic partnership with Vote Forward (votefwd.org) which aggregates lists of voters from around the country in swing districts who need encouragement to vote this November. You can sign up and send personalized letters to folks in key places explaining why voting is so important to YOU and why their vote in particular really matters.

Postcards to Voters (postcardstovoters.org)

A rotating selection of campaigns to boost democratic turnout for special elections, voting by mail and many down ballot races as well. These smaller races are key to winning back control at the federal level, so we start state by state. Sign up and you can request addresses to connect with important voters.

5 Calls (5calls.org)

Website (and an app) that allows you to choose your protest topic and then gives you a detailed script and shows you which Senators and Congress people to call/contact based on your address.

Rogan's list (roganslist.blogspot.com)

This is a great blog that offers a daily email chock full of links and easy action items to keep you involved and resisting. Partnered with Rise Stronger.

Resistbot (resistbot.io)

This is a text messaging service that sends letters and faxes to your elected officials. Text the word “resist” to “504-09” it will prompt you to add your zip code and address to identify your elected officials. Then you can easily cut and paste copy from elsewhere or write your own text. The service formats and sends it and even allows you to preview it before it goes out. Resist anytime, anywhere.

You can also sign up for texting directly through certain organizations like: MoveOn, Resistance Labs, Common Cause and many others.

FYI – many of the texting groups use Slack as an organizing tool to explain projects, gather support and ask/answer questions.
